BULLETIN NO. 273-1

SUBJECT: THE COMMISSION INSPECTION PROGRAM

Heads of Departments and Independent Establishments:

Since its beginning in 1947, the Commission's inspection program has attempted to keep pace with the evolution in Federal personnel management. In response to the need for Commission and agency top officials to know more fully about the effectiveness of their total personnel programs, we developed the approach of evaluating an agency's personnel program on a nationwide basis, within a specified period of time. The use of this nationwide approach by the Commission led to other major substantive changes in the inspection program.

Because of the importance of having agencies understand the "new" inspection program, we are presenting its chief features in some detail in this Bulletin.

The Aim of the Inspection Program

While mindful of its responsibility for assuring that agencies comply with the statutory and other mandatory obligations, the Commission considers one of the principal missions of the inspection program to be that of helping all agencies achieve a wholly effective personnel management system in the Government. To meet this purpose, the Commission has established the following basic goals for its inspection and classification audit program:

- To contribute to the continuous improvement of Federal personnel management through the review and evaluation of operating personnel programs at the activity level; in the process, to identify areas of strength and weakness; to make suggestions and recommendations and to provide assistance for improvement where needed.

- To provide top management officials at headquarters and other administrative levels with periodic agency-wide evaluations of their personnel operations.
- To keep key Commission officials informed of the scope, content, and effectiveness of agency personnel management programs; and, the effectiveness of personnel laws, policies, regulations, standards, etc.
- To advise Commission and other Executive and Legislative officials of significant trends in Federal personnel management program areas.
- To assist agencies in placing into effect new or changing programs in the government personnel system.
- To provide advice and assistance on personnel matters, on a day-to-day basis, to agency officials and others at all levels of operation.

The Nation-wide Inspection Approach

To accomplish one of the principal goals of the present-day inspection program - that of providing top-ranking agency officials with periodic and meaningful appraisals of their total personnel management programs - we started inspecting agency establishments on a nation-wide approach in Fiscal Year 1960. Principal features of this approach include:

- The use of the total inspection facilities of the Commission (both regional and central offices) on a coordinated basis.
- The inspection of a representative sample of establishments, including the headquarters offices, within a given agency.
- The analysis and coordination of findings from all inspections conducted within the agency during the specified period of time.
- The presentation of an overall summary evaluation to the head of the agency.

The nation-wide inspection program covers those agencies which have a significant number of field establishments. Presently, there are 17 such agencies employing approximately 94% of the Federal civilian work force.

Generally, six of these agencies are scheduled for nation-wide inspection each fiscal year. Thus, the overall personnel program of an agency, within the nationwide inspection program, will be evaluated about once every three years.

The nation-wide inspection plan developed for each agency is individually tailored to meet the needs of the particular agency as well as those of the Commission. In developing individual nation-wide inspection plans, representatives of the Commission work closely with personnel officials of agency headquarters office on such matters as scheduling, organizational coverage, special program emphasis, special sampling instructions, special reporting instructions, etc. The final inspection plan is a joint product of the agency and the Commission.

Individual inspections of agency establishments within the nationwide plan are generally conducted in very much the same manner as those previously done by the Commission's inspecting offices. Each agency unit scheduled for inspection receives advance notice of the inspection. In practically all inspections, the individual program areas of chapter A-4 of the Federal Personnel Manual are reviewed, some personnel actions and classification determinations are audited and some employees and supervisors interviewed. The tentative findings and conclusions are discussed with key officials of the establishment before a formal report is prepared. Finally, a formal report on the inspection of each installation is furnished to the responsible agency officials informing them of the effectiveness of the personnel program under their control.

Inspection Scheduling

With the advent of the nationwide inspection program, we have moved away from a fixed or arbitrary inspection cycle in programming individual inspections of establishments.

In addition to the agency establishments scheduled for nation-wide inspection coverage, each Commission inspecting office is free to schedule inspections of other establishments as the "need" for such inspections becomes evident. These "need" inspections may include establishments of those agencies subject to current nationwide plans as well as establishments or agencies outside the nationwide program. Whether an agency establishment should be inspected is determined by each inspecting office in consideration of such matters as: the nature of known personnel problems at the establishment, evidence of any significant changes in program areas, the length of time that has elapsed since the establishment was last inspected; etc. (The need for an inspection may also determine the type of inspection to be conducted; that is, a full-scale comprehensive review of all significant program areas, or an intensive survey limited to a single program area for a special purpose.)

A New Type of Inspection

With the introduction of the nation-wide inspection program, and the resulting modification in the approach to the scheduling of inspections, the need for yet another type of visit to agency establishments became evident if the Commission inspecting offices were to maintain current knowledge of personnel management operations throughout the government. Discussions among Commission offices on the primary objectives of such a visit, as well as the scope of the visit itself, culminated in the concept of the "abbreviated inspection."

Since the start of this fiscal year, Commission offices have been authorized to use abbreviated inspections to supplement their regular inspection schedule. By the end of the fiscal year, this new type of inspection will be regularly used by all Commission offices, departmental and field.

The abbreviated inspection differs most significantly from a general inspection in the way it is conducted rather than in the scope of program covered or the primary objectives. As in the case of general inspections, abbreviated inspections serve to evaluate the effectiveness of an operating personnel management program in significant areas; and to provide assistance, wherever possible, in strengthening program areas which require improvement to meet applicable concepts, policies, and standards. Consistent with these primary objectives, Commission offices will most likely use abbreviated inspections for a number of purposes, for example:

- Provide current information about operating personnel programs which have not undergone a general full-scale inspection for a considerable period of time.
- Point out need for subsequent full-scale inspection.
- Establish rapport with new agency personnel and top management officials.
- Provide means for evaluating the personnel programs of small field establishments in which the Commission would not routinely conduct general full-scale inspections.
- Provide means for giving advice and assistance on current problems in establishments which have not been contacted for a considerable period of time.

While abbreviated inspections cover essentially the same scope of programs as general inspections, there is considerable less depth of inquiry. Program evaluation will normally be based on review of written agency policies and instructions and discussions with personnel staff and key management officials. As a rule, there would be no case review, employee interviews, or use of questionnaires. Most abbreviated inspections will be conducted by a single Commission inspector within a period of one to five working days. Procedurally, the head of each establishment scheduled for an abbreviated inspection will be notified in advance as is done for scheduled general inspections. Both opening and closing conferences will be held with the top management office (or his designated representative) of the establishment. Finally, a written report will be made to the agency establishment. However, the written report will be in the form of a brief letter summarizing significant findings and conclusions in place of the more detailed and formal report prepared for the full-scale general type of inspection.

The changes described in this Bulletin are not the only changes taking place in the Commission Inspection Program. Through various ways and means, the Commission makes self-evaluations of its program of the same kinds that it has long encouraged agencies to make for themselves. Continually, there is need to examine the inspection activity in light of developments in Federal personnel programs. Continually, there will be need to make other significant operational changes to increase the value of the inspection program to all agencies. The Commission will work with the agencies in the development of new evaluative methods, techniques, and concepts to help in attaining the goal of a wholly effective personnel system in the government.
